

Chief Executive Officer

The Position

We are looking for a dynamic visionary individual to lead the growth and development of Philanthropy Colorado in accordance with the organization's strategic roadmap. The Chief Executive Officer (CEO) will work closely with the Board of Directors (BOD) and will lead the team in advancing the organization's near and long-term goals.

About You

- ✚ You are aligned and committed to the values identified in our Strategic Roadmap (Collaboration, Diversity, Equity, Generosity, Humility, Inclusion, Leadership, Transformation).
- ✚ You are an entrepreneurial self-starter who is well prepared to be thoroughly productive, an exemplary leader, collaborator, and communicator.
- ✚ You have depth and expertise in collaborating with a Board of Directors, developing innovative partnerships, committees, and stakeholders.
- ✚ You have implemented strategies to deliver long-term financial health for the organization; developed and managed the organizational budget and overseen fundraising strategies and supported fundraising programs.
- ✚ You have demonstrated experience with developing and executing strategic programs, advocacy efforts and expanding the organizations statewide presence.
- ✚ You are willing to travel, and you thrive in a remote work environment, attending in-person meetings and events as required.

A Day in the Life

- ✚ Network Leadership, Development and Culture:
 - Provide executive leadership that reflects the organization's values and vision.
 - Promote equity, diversity, and inclusion; create a positive and collective culture.
 - Foster a culture of accountability, follow through, and ongoing staff education and development.
 - Build on a culture that celebrates authenticity and contributes to the retention of talented and diverse team members.
- ✚ Strategic Planning and Programming:
 - Develop ongoing strategies for continuously engaging current members.
 - Continue to cultivate meaningful connections with and among members to ensure the organization's relevance amid the varied and changing needs of the philanthropic sector.
 - Maintain a big and inclusive tent by listening to the needs of a diverse spectrum of members and building consensus where possible, while also encouraging the field to be open to new ways of approaching its work.
 - Ensure the programs and activities of the organization tie closely to the priorities of the strategic roadmap.
 - Stay current on new and emerging trends of education programming and advocacy efforts.
 - Create robust reporting, evaluation, and updates outlining successes and challenges.

Board of Directors and Collaboration:

- Partner with the board to create the overall vision and strategy for Philanthropy Colorado, seeking ongoing input from team and membership. Continue to build a strong pipeline of diverse directors.
- Implement diversity and inclusion recruitment strategies to hire, onboard and train new Board members in partnership with the Board Members and Officers.
- Develop strong relationships with board directors and promote their efforts to grow and develop Board systems, officers, committees, governance and decision-making processes in partnerships.

Financial Stewardship

- Develop and implement a strategy to deliver long-term financial health for the organization.
- Serve as Chief Financial Officer (CFO). Create and manage the organizational budget and internal controls, fiscal policies, and banking in partnership with Treasurer, Finance Committee, Bookkeeper and Auditor.

Fundraising

- Collaborate with the Board and other stakeholders to define fundraising priorities.
- Ensure ample financial resources by reviewing and revamping of dues, grant strategies and goals.
- Pursue new revenue streams and business models to build on current structure.

Advocacy and Communications

- Act as a champion and ambassador for Philanthropy Colorado and the field, developing connections with stakeholders (regulators, policy makers, nonprofit/philanthropy-serving groups, and others) in various sectors in Colorado and nationally.
- Lead the advocacy and policy strategy in partnership with the team and members.
- Oversee effective communications and goals and collaborate collectively with the team on tools and technology to support them.
- Present information effectively and respond to questions from board members, managers, staff and external stakeholders.

About Us

Philanthropy Colorado is a vibrant statewide network with active involvement of 125+ organizations that represent the diversity of the sector and our state. Since its founding more than 50 years ago, members have recognized the value of coming together as a grantmaking community to share expertise, skills, and experiences. The organization offers a robust set of programs, professional development and learning communities, in addition to advocacy and policy activities aimed at strengthening the charitable sector and communities across Colorado.

Philanthropy Colorado is also recognized for its long-time efforts to nurture peer-led networks that bring members together regularly around issues of interest and professional roles. Some of the groups currently include arts and culture, climate action, early childhood, impact investing, information technology, public policy, CEO leadership, community foundations, finance, human resources/operations, executive administration, and small funders. Philanthropy Colorado was among the first statewide philanthropy networks to establish a full-time role five years ago to focus on ensuring members work collaboratively to understand and support the unique needs of rural Colorado.

As an active champion of its national network, Philanthropy Colorado has a long tradition of working in partnership with its members and its partners nationwide to embrace advocacy and policy work as critical for the field and the causes it supports. Increasing the field's capacity to advocate and seek policy change, in addition to advocating for the sector itself, has become an increasingly important component of Philanthropy's Colorado work.

An evolving strategic roadmap solidifies a commitment to embrace equity and inclusion as imperatives, as the outcomes Colorado communities deserve that result from the connections of Philanthropy Colorado's statewide funder-led network. With a diverse staff of five experienced professionals, the team and board continue to work individually and together to build and embrace a culture of belonging that includes ongoing learning about racial equity and inclusion.

With an operating budget of roughly $900,000, Philanthropy Colorado's revenues come from a mix of dues, grants and program fees from its membership. Currently, 12 leaders from across Colorado philanthropy serve on its committed board of directors. The organization operates as a hybrid organization with an office suite currently housed at Colorado Gives Foundation in Arvada, CO, but with team members working remotely when they are not meeting in person or hosting programs and events.

This transition follows 14 years of leadership by Philanthropy Colorado's first full-time chief executive Joanne Kelley, who has worked together with the board, the team, members, and partners to transform the organization into one of the most highly respected regional philanthropy networks in the country.
